

This is the first time Ramsey resident Nancy Motto has had the opportunity to show her work. “Photography and painting have taught me to ‘adopt the pace of nature: her secret is patience’, in the words of Ralph Waldo Emerson, says Nancy. “Having a camera or paint brush in hand make me look at the world with new eyes.”

Marcy Cagan, also from Ramsey, has been exhibiting her work for the last 12 years, having her first show with The Collage Collective at the Ramsey Library in 2005. Since then, her collages and photographs have been all over the county, winning awards and recognition. “The textures and images in collage are a powerful form of communication. And photography is part of who I am, every day. Putting them together is an exhilarating expression of ideas,” she explains.
